New language labo

Janet McCallum

VICTORIA'S newly installed language laboratory is already operating at full capacity.
It is in use from 10am till 4pm daily, though

University Extension course to that the small group of students who have been accepted for the course are already working on their assignments. The Department of University Extension has been operating for some time, but the laboratory for the study of languages has only been established recently. The laboratory is situated in the new building at the University of Victoria. It is a well-equipped room with a large number of books and a number of typewriters. The laboratory is open to students of the University of Victoria and to students of other universities who are interested in the study of languages. The laboratory is a very useful facility for students who are studying languages and who need a quiet place to study and write.
